PREFACE

The study, Sensitively Assessing Children's Testimonial Competence, 1997 has been given to the National Data Archive on Child Abuse and Neglect for public distribution by Karen Saywitz and Thomas D. Lyon. Funding for the project was provided by the Office on Child Abuse and Neglect, Children’s Bureau, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Contract #90-CA-1553.
ABSTRACT

Most courts require that all witnesses take an oath, or at least "promise" to tell the truth when testifying. To appreciate the oath, a witness must understand the difference between truths and lies, as well as his or her obligation to tell the truth. The courts, therefore, routinely question child witnesses regarding their understanding of truth and lies before allowing them to testify. This research project examines the most sensitive means by which to measure children's competency to take an oath. Researchers conducted six studies using 475 children ages 4 to 7 years old. Two groups of children were tested: one group (352 children) were maltreated children under the jurisdiction of the Los Angeles County juvenile court, and the other group (123 children) were nonreferred children attending a university preschool. In each study the children were interviewed and tested by an examiner who gave them questions to answer and tasks to perform. The results show (1) young maltreated child witnesses exhibit serious delays in receptive and productive vocabulary; (2) the children's understanding of the meaning and morality of lying depends on how they are asked to demonstrate their understanding; (3) despite weak vocabularies, most maltreated children understand the meaning and morality of lying by age 5; and (4) young child witnesses may not understand the request "promise to tell the truth".

OVERVIEW

Background

Although the Federal Rules of Evidence and many states have liberalized the statutory prerequisites for testimonial competence, it is still a requirement in most courts that all witnesses take the oath, or at least “promise” to tell the truth. In order to appreciate the oath, a witness must understand the difference between the truth and lies and appreciate her obligation to tell the truth. The courts therefore routinely question child witnesses regarding their understanding of the truth and lies before allowing them to testify (Haugaard & Reppucci, 1992; McGough, 1992; Myers, 1992; Whitcomb, 1992).

The rules of testimonial competence merely require that the witness understands the nature and obligations of the oath. Competence statutes do not specify the questions that must be asked of the witness in order to ascertain testimonial competence. The rules of competence do not require that a witness demonstrate an abstract understanding of the nature of truth and lies. Moreover, the rules of competence do not require a particular level of sophistication in hypothetical reasoning abilities. If a witness recognizes that lying in court is wrong and subjects the liar to punishment, she understands her obligations under the oath, even if she refuses to reason hypothetically on the stand about the aversive consequences to herself should she lie.

Purpose of Project

A recurring theme in developmental psychology is the potential for underestimating children's abilities due to the use of unnecessarily complicated tasks. Researchers exploring competencies first believed to be non-existent before middle childhood have found a number of domains in which young children perform well if the verbal demands of the tasks are minimized and if the tasks are stripped of extraneous complications (Donaldson, 1978; Flavell, Miller, & Miller, 1993; Gelman & Baillargeon, 1983). Children's failure on traditional tasks may reveal less about their understanding of the concepts that the researchers were interested in testing than their difficulty with the way in which the tests were constructed. Examination of the common methods by which children are questioned regarding their competence suggests that the courts have similarly underestimated children's abilities. The goal of this research project was to determine the most sensitive means by which children's competence to take the oath may be measured.

Study 1: Maltreated Children's Understanding of the Meaning of "truth" and "lie"

The purpose of this study was to examine different means for assessing children's understanding of the difference between truth and lies and their obligation to tell the truth. Each child was given five tasks, (a) the identification task, (b) the difference task, (c) the definition task, (d) the morality task, and (e) the Peabody Picture Vocabulary Test-Revised (PPVT-R) (a test of receptive vocabulary). In the identification task, the child was asked to identify statements about pictures of objects as either "the truth" or "a lie." In the difference task, children were tested for their ability to explain the difference between objects, their understanding of whether telling the truth and telling the lie are different, and their explanation of the difference between the truth and lies. In the definition task, children were asked whether they knew what it meant to tell the truth and to tell a lie, and were asked to define the terms. In the morality task, children were asked whether it was good or bad to tell the truth or lie to an authority figure, why it was good or bad, and whether telling the truth or a lie would make an authority figure happy or mad.

Participants

Participants in this study were awaiting a court appearance in the Los Angeles County Juvenile Court. Each participant had been removed from the custody of his or her parent or guardian due to allegations of abuse and/or neglect, and had been transported from a foster care placement to an area called "shelter care" in the court building. The Department of Children and Family Services (DCFS) and the Presiding Judge of the Juvenile Court gave permission for participants to participate, with the exception of children whose attorneys had objected to their participation in the study. Spanish-speaking participants were excluded only if they were clearly incapable of communicating with the researcher in English or if they were officially recognized as Spanish-speaking, either by social services or by the Juvenile Court. Participants were also excluded if they were awaiting an adjudication hearing (at which the allegations of abuse or neglect are adjudicated) on the day of their appearance in shelter care, due to concerns expressed by children's attorneys that if they testified at such a hearing, they would be questioned regarding their competence to take the oath twice in one day. Participants were asked for their assent to participate; 96 of 106 asked agreed to do so. The final sample consisted of 96 children, ages 4 through 7, with 24 children in each age group.

The composition was chosen to match the population of abused and neglected children under the care of the Los Angeles County Department of Children and Family Services, which is approximately 42% African-American, 33% Latino (including Spanish Speaking), 22% Caucasian, and 3% other (Digre, 1994).

Materials

The materials included nine "surprise doors," eight moral story cards, and the PPVT-R (Peabody Picture Vocabulary Test-Revised). The "surprise doors" were illustrations of familiar objects (e.g. ball, lion, cake) inside a piece of brightly colored cardstock that was folded so that one lifted the top (by means of a small bow) in order to reveal the picture inside. The moral story cards depicted either a boy or a girl speaking to a female adult (a judge, social worker, grandmother, or doctor). A sample script is attached as Appendix A.

Procedure

Researchers reviewed each participant’s court records to determine the type of abuse and/or neglect, the number of times the child’s placement had been changed, and the amount of time the child had been under the supervision of the juvenile court. In order to determine the type of abuse and/or neglect, the dependency court petition was also reviewed. 85 of the 96 participants' court files were located. Researchers used the coding scheme for the type and severity of abuse or neglect and the identity of the perpetrator developed by Barnett, Manly, and Cicchetti (1993).

Each child was given five tasks, the identification task, the difference task, the definition task, the morality task, and the PPVT-R (Peabody Picture Vocabulary Test-Revised), a test of receptive vocabulary.

On the identification task, children were asked to identify four statements as either the truth or lies, two of which were true and two of which were false. Whether "truth" or "lie" was mentioned first alternated trial by trial. Half of the participants at each age received a truthful trial first and half received a lying trial first.

In the difference task, the experimenter told the child that he or she would see two surprise doors and that the child could say whether the doors were the "same" or "different." Participants were given two difference warm-ups to assess their general understanding of "different" and "the same." Then, the experimenter asked about "telling a lie and telling the truth"; whether they were different or the same (the incorrect choice mentioned last).

In the definition task, the experimenter suggested that they pretend that the experimenter was a baby and did not know what some words meant, and that the experimenter would say some words and the child would say "what they are." The experimenter gave examples of definitions for "milk" and "dog," and then asked the child to define "cat" and "taking a nap." The experimenter then asked the child, "How about telling a lie. Do you know what it means to tell a lie?" followed by "What does it mean to tell a lie?" and up to two follow-up requests for more information. The same questions were then asked for "telling the truth."

In the morality task the child was shown four illustrations and told a brief story regarding each illustration. The illustrations depicted either a boy or girl speaking to one of four females, who were depicted and described as a doctor, a grandmother, a judge or a "lady who comes to see [the child] at home" (intended to be a social worker). Participants could respond correctly on 0-4 questions regarding the goodness or badness of lying or telling the truth, and 0-4 questions regarding whether an adult would be happy or mad if a child lied or told the truth. Both the children and the adults in the illustrations were drawn without facial expressions and without racial identification. Each child received a block of two stories in which the child lied and a block of two stories in which the child told the truth. Half of the participants at each age received the lie block first and half received the truth block first. Each child received two stories with girl story children and two stories with boy story children, one child of each gender lying and telling the truth. Across children at each age, a equal number of adults were lied to or told the truth.

All children were administered the morality task after the identification, difference and definition tasks, and all children were given the PPVT-R last.
Studies 2 & 3: The Oath Competency Picture Task

The second and third studies attempted to devise a method for testing children's understanding of the meaning of truth and lie that would minimize motivational difficulties in identifying a lie as such. Two story children make true and false statements about an object, hoping to reduce the motivational difficulties faced by children when asked about truth-telling and lying. One story character lies, and the child merely has to identify which story character does so. The participant therefore need not identify the experimenter as a liar, and denying that a lie has been told at all is not an option. Moreover, the task allowed researchers to visually depict truth-telling and lying, through the use of talk bubbles, which reduces the memory demands of the task. These adaptations were tested on a new sample of referred children in Study 2. Non-referred children were tested in Study 3 using the same methodology.

Participants

Participants in Study 2 were drawn from the same sample as Study 1. The final sample in Study 2 consisted of 96 children, with 48 4-year-olds and 84 5-year-olds. Again, participant's court records were reviewed to determine the type of abuse and/or neglect, the number of times the child's placement had been changed, and the amount of time the child had been under the supervision of the juvenile court. Unlike Study 1, researchers reviewed various supporting documents in the court file, which typically included a police report, an application for petition, and a pre-adjudication social study.

Participants in Study 3 were drawn from a university preschool, which serves nonreferred young children most of whose parents are well-educated and upper middle class. The final sample consisted of 48 children, with 24 3-year-olds and 24 4-year-olds. The ethnic composition of the sample was 2% African-American, 71% Caucasian, and 27% Asian and others. There were no Latinos in the sample.

Materials

The materials for Study 2 and Study 3 included six “reality story” sheets, six “morality story” sheets, and the PPVT-R. The “reality story” sheets were illustrations of two children (either both boys or girls) on either side of a familiar objects (e.g. cat, pizza, teddy bear). Above each child was a “talk bubble,” which contained either a copy of the object (reduced slightly) or a different object. Each talk bubble was covered with a brightly colored piece of felt, so that the contents of the talk bubble were not visible unless the felt was lifted. The “morality story” sheets depicted two children (either both boys or girls) on ether side of a female adult (a judge, social worker, grandmother, or doctor). The adults were identical to those depicted in the morality task of Study 1. Both the children and adults in the illustrations were drawn without facial expressions and without racial identification. A sample script is attached as Appendix B.
Procedure

In the reality stories task, the experimenter placed a reality story sheet in front of the child and asked the child to identify the object. If the child could not provide a label, the experimenter would give clues. The experimenter would then accept and repeat the label provided by the child. The experimenter then told the child to “Listen to what these boys [girls] say about the [child’s label for object],” and added either that “[o]ne of them will say something wrong and one will say something right” or that “[o]ne of them will tell a lie and one will tell the truth.” Starting with the story child depicted on the left of the picture, the experimenter then told the child what each story child called the object.

After revealing how each story child labeled the object, the experimenter asked the child to identify either the child who was telling a lie, telling the truth, saying something right, or saying something wrong. So that the child could remember how each story child labeled the object, the felt over the talk bubbles remained up during this question.

In the morality stories task the experimenter showed the child an illustration depicting either two boys or two girls speaking to one of three females, who were depicted and described as a doctor, a judge, or a “lady who comes to see [the child] at home” (intended to be a social worker). Each story was similarly constructed. The professional was identified, and the child was told the professional “wants to know what happened” to the children. The experimenter then said that one of the children would either “get in trouble” or “say something bad.”

Starting with the story child depicted on the left of the professional, the experimenter told the child whether each story child “tells the truth,” “tells a lie,” “says what’s right”, or “says what’s wrong.” The child was then asked to identify which story child was “gonna get in trouble” or “said something bad,” and was asked to explain his or her response.

The reality and morality stories were counterbalanced so that half of the participants at each age received the reality stories first, and half received the morality stories first. All children were administered the PPVT-R last.

Study 4: Children's Willingness to Discuss the Negative Consequences of Lying

In order to determine children's competence, adults often ask the child to discuss what would happen if she lied on the stand. If the child understands that lying leads to punishment, then she appreciates the importance of telling the truth. Research on children's understanding of the consequences of lying suggests that at least by five years of age, children understand that lies are punished. As with children's understanding of truth and lie, however, there are a number of cases in which children's performance in court falls far below their performance in laboratory research. We believe that this is due in part to children's difficulty with reasoning hypothetically about the unpleasant consequences to them should they lie. The hypothesis of this study was that young children are well aware of the negative consequences of lying, and can demonstrate such an understanding if the questions they are asked are more sensitive to their difficulties with hypothetical reasoning. This study hypothesized that young children are well aware of the negative consequences of lying, and can demonstrate such an understanding if the questions they are asked are more sensitive to their difficulties with hypothetical reasoning.

Participants

Participants in this study were drawn from the same population as in Studies 1 and 2. 64 of 68 participants asked to participate agreed to do so. The final sample consisted of 64 5- and 6-year-old children (31 girls and 33 boys). The ethnic composition of the sample was 42% Latino, 31% African-American, 23% Caucasian, and 2% other (including Asian and Native-American).

Researchers reviewed each participant’s court records to determine the number of items the child’s placement had been changed, and the amount of time the child had been under the supervision of the juvenile court. The records of placement changes may have underestimated movements from one foster home to another, but would capture movements from the parent’s custody to that of relatives or foster placement. The average child had moved 3 times (M = 3.06, SD = .30), 31.3% had moved 4 or more times.

Materials

Participants were given the vocabulary subtest of the Wechsler Preschool Scale of Intelligence Revised (WPPSI-R), a measure of productive vocabulary that is highly correlated with other measures of verbal intelligence. Like the other studies, Study 4 utilized a stories and ascript which elicited responses from children. A sample script is attached as Appendix C.

Procedure

An experimenter showed the participant pictures of three professionals (a judge, a social worker, and a doctor), explained the role the professional plays (e.g., “The judge listens to what everyone says and then decides how to keep children safe and healthy”), and said that the professional wanted to know if someone had hurt the child. For each professional, the experimenter asked the child five or six questions regarding the consequences of lying, and then asked the child if he or she would ever lie to that professional.

In the first two consequence questions, the experimenter asked the participant what "would happen" and what the professional "would do" if the child lied. The third question asked the child where the professional would "make the [child] go" if the child lied, and was asked only with reference to the judge and the social worker (since doctors do not typically have power over determining where a child will go). The fourth and fifth questions asked the participant what the child's mother would do and what God would do if the child lied. Children in the “self” condition were asked about the consequences they would suffer should they lie, whereas children in the “other” condition were asked about the consequences a story child would suffer.

Participants were given the WPPSI before the main task, and assignment to group was based upon the participant's age, gender, and an approximation of the participant's WPPSI score so that these factors would be equal in both groups.
The sessions were videotaped and the tapes transcribed by one of three transcribers, all of whom were blind to the hypotheses of the study. Two coders who were blind to the hypotheses of the study and blind to the exact questions asked by the experimenter (whether the experimenter referred to the participant or a story child was obscured) independently coded all of the responses as to whether the child failed to respond (either "I don't know" or no response), and, when the participant did provide a response, whether the response was incomprehensible, ambiguous as to valence, or was negatively valenced. Moreover, coders gave each response a qualitative code, which was derived from pilot testing.

Studies 5 & 6: Children's Understanding of Promising as a Guarantee

Most states require all witnesses to take some form of the oath before testifying, although in a number of states child witnesses may simply “promise” to tell the truth. If the elicitation of a promise from the child to tell the truth is to have an effect on the likelihood that the child will do so, it is important that the child understand that promising is meant to increase the likelihood that one will do what one says one will do. In these studies, researchers examined young children’s understanding that a “promise” implies a stronger commitment than a statement that one “will,” “might,” or “won’t” perform some deed.

Participants

Participants in Study 5 study were drawn from the same population as in Studies 1, 2, and 4. 97 of the 102 asked to participate agreed to do so. One child’s interview was interrupted so that the child could be transported back to foster care. The final sample thus consisted of 96 4- to 7-year-old children, 24 in each age group. There were equal numbers of boys and girls in each age group. The ethnic composition for the sample was 43% African-American, 33% Latino, 22% Caucasian, and 2% other (including Asian and Native-American). The number of changes in placement was estimated by reviewing computerized records of juvenile court dispositions.

The 75 participants in Study 6 were drawn from the same university preschool used in Study 3. The final sample consisted of 25 3-year-olds, 26 4-year-olds, and 24 5-year-olds. The ethnic composition of the sample was 5% African-American, 64% Caucasian, 21% Asian, and 8% other (e.g. Pacific Islander, Native American). There were no Latinos in the sample.

Materials

In order to assess the children’s receptive vocabulary, researchers administered the Peabody Picture Vocabulary Test, Revised (PPVT-R). In order to make the task engaging for young children, structured the task was structured as a game. Studies 5 & 6 used the same materials and script. A sample script is attached as Appendix D.
Procedure

The same procedure was used in both Study 5 and Study 6. The experimenter showed the child a large number of brightly colored plastic boxes, and explained that some of the boxes had toys inside of them, and some boxes did not, and that the child could “figure out” which boxes had toys inside by listening to some stories. The child was told a series of stories in which two story characters made discrepant statements regarding whether they would put a toy in their respective boxes, using the words “promise,” “will,” “might,” or “won’t.” Six pairs of words were contrasted: promise/will, promise/might, promise/won’t, will/might, will/won’t, and might/won’t. After placing a box under each story child, the experimenter asked the child to choose which story child’s box had a toy.

Participants were given a total of 12 stories, 2 of each pair of words. The stories were counterbalanced so that children who exhibited a preference for a particular color box, story child, or position (box on right or box on left) would score at chance. At the end of the task, the experimenter and the child opened all of the boxes that the child had picked (all of which contained toys). In each story, the participant was shown two felt children, one red and one blue. Boy participants heard about boy story characters and girl participants heard about girl story characters.
DESCRIPTION OF MACHINE-READABLE FILES

The Archive distributes these data as SAS transport or SPSS portable files. Other file formats and data subsets can be prepared by special request. Please refer to the NDACAN order form or call us for more information.

File Characteristics

The Archive distributes six data files for this project; one for each study. A brief description of each file is provided below. Frequencies and summary statistics are available from the NDACAN web server.

Introduction:

I've got some surprise doors. If you open a door, you'll see the picture that's underneath. So let's look at ONE of the doors. Go ahead and open it. (Ball)

[OH, a toy! What kind of toy is that?]

OK, that's a [child's label].

Hey, I have a LOT MORE of these surprise doors. Let's look at some more.

Form A IDENTIFICATION TASK; Lie first; Word List A

Here's what we can do. When we look at a picture, sometimes I'll make up a LIE about the picture; sometimes I'll say something TRUE about the picture. YOU tell me when I'm telling a LIE and when I'm telling the TRUTH.

1. lie; truth mentioned first (Lion/Puppy)

Here's ANOTHER surprise door. Open it up and see what it is.

[OH, an animal! What kind of animal is that?]

OK, that's a [child's label].

Now, (child's name), if I say that's a PUPPY, is that the TRUTH or a LIE?

[I say that's a PUPPY; is that the TRUTH or a LIE?]

2. truth; lie mentioned first (Apple)

Here's ANOTHER surprise door. Open it up and see what it is.

[OH, some food! What kind of food is that?]

OK, that's a [child's label].

Now, (child's name), if I say that's a [child's label], is that a LIE or the TRUTH?

[I say that's a [child's label]. Is that a LIE or the TRUTH?]
3. truth: truth mentioned first (Truck)

Here's ANOTHER surprise door. Open it up and see what it is.

[OH, a toy! What kind of toy is that?]

OK, that's a [child's label].

Now, (child's name), if I say that's a [child's label], is that the TRUTH or a LIE?

[I say that's a [child's label]. Is that the TRUTH or a LIE?]

4. lie: lie mentioned first (Horse/Snake)

Here's ANOTHER surprise door. Open it up and see what it is.

[OH, an animal! What kind of animal is that?]

OK, that's a [child's label].

Now, (child's name), if I say that's a SNAKE, is that a LIE or the TRUTH?

[I say that's a SNAKE. Is that a LIE or the TRUTH?]

Form A DEFINITION task

Let's do something DIFFERENT. Now let's pretend that I'm a BABY and that I don't know what some WORDS mean. I'm gonna tell you the WORDS and you tell me what they are.

LIKE if I said MILK, you could tell me that it's something you DRINK and it's WHITE.

Or if I said DOG, you could tell me that it's an ANIMAL and it likes to go RUFF RUFF.

All right,

--How about CAT. Do you know what a CAT is?
Tell me--what is a CAT?

[follow-up with:
Tell me something else about a CAT.]

[followup with:
Can you tell me more about a CAT?]
--How about BANANA. Do you know what a BANANA is?
Tell me--what is a BANANA?

[followup with:
Tell me something else about a BANANA.]

[followup with:
Can you tell me more about a BANANA?]

--How about LIE. Do you know what a LIE is?
Tell me--what is a LIE?

[followup with:
Tell me something else about a LIE.]

[followup with:
Can you tell me more about a LIE?]

--How about TRUTH. Do you know what the TRUTH is?
Tell me--what is the TRUTH?

[followup with:
Tell me something else about the TRUTH.]

[followup with:
Can you tell me more about the TRUTH?]

Form A DIFFERENCE task

Let's do something DIFFERENT. This time, I'm going to show you TWO surprise doors, and you can tell me if they're the SAME or if they're DIFFERENT.

OK. Here's TWO surprise doors. Open them up and see what they are. (two different objects; SOCK and TREE)

[OH, what is this one? And what is this one?]

Now LOOK at the pictures, and tell me, are they the SAME or DIFFERENT?

Tell me--what is DIFFERENT (the SAME) about the pictures.

[followup with:

FORM A (MORALITY TASK) G/Grandmother B/SW G/Dr B/Judge

I'm going to show you some PICTURES of some GIRLS and BOYS and tell you some STORIES.

A1. Grandmother/lie/good first/happy first

Look at THIS girl.
She's talking to her Grandmother.
Her Grandmother wants to know what happened to the girl.

Well, the girl tells her Grandmother a LIE.
The girl does NOT tell the TRUTH.
Now, (child's name),
Do you think it was GOOD or BAD for her to tell a LIE?
[Was it GOOD or BAD to tell a lie?]

Why was it (BAD/GOOD) to tell a lie?

If her Grandmother finds out the girl told a LIE, how will that make her grandmother FEEL--HAPPY or MAD?

A2. SW/lie/bad first/mad first

Here's a BOY.
He's talking to a LADY who comes to see him at HOME.
This LADY wants to know what happened to the boy.

Well, the boy tells the Lady a LIE.
The boy does NOT tell the TRUTH.

Now, (child's name),
Do you think it was BAD or GOOD for him to tell a LIE?
[Was it BAD or GOOD to tell a lie?]

Why was it (BAD/GOOD) to tell a lie?

If this LADY finds out the boy told a LIE, how will that make this lady FEEL--MAD or HAPPY?

A3. Dr/truth/good first/happy first

Here's a DIFFERENT girl.
She's talking to this lady, who is a DOCTOR.
The DOCTOR wants to know what happened to the girl.

Well, the girl tells the doctor the TRUTH.
The girl does NOT tell any LIES.

Study 5 (form A*: Might/Won’t, Female)

I have a bunch of little boxes. Let me show you. Some of the boxes have TOYS inside of them (opening up box). Some of the boxes don’t have ANYTHING INSIDE. We can play a game with these boxes. Here’s what we’ll do: I’ll tell you STORIES about boys and girls. You’ll LISTEN to what they say, and you can FIGURE OUT which boxes have TOYS inside. OK?

You can PICK which box has a toy, and when we’re DONE with the stories, we can open the boxes to see if there are TOYS inside.

Here’s the FIRST story.
Here’s two girls: a BLUE girl and a RED girl.
The BLUE girl says: I MIGHT put a toy in my box.
The RED girl says: I WON’T put a toy in my box.

NOW ONE of the girls is gonna put a TOY in her box. (Taking board and applying boxes.)
Now REMEMBER:
The BLUE girl said: I MIGHT (put a toy in my box).
and the RED girl said: I WON’T (put a toy in my box).
Which girl’s box has a toy?

(Here’s ANOTHER story.
LISTEN to what the children say, and you can PICK which box has a toy.)
(Should we do another one? Let’s do another one.)
(Here comes another story.)

(Left speak first, right correct)

The BLUE girl says: I MIGHT put a toy in my box.
The RED girl says: I PROMISE I’ll put a toy in my box.

NOW ONE of the girls is gonna put a TOY in her box. (Taking board and applying boxes.)
Now REMEMBER:
The BLUE girl said: I MIGHT (put a toy in my box)
and the RED girl said I PROMISE (I’ll put a toy in my box).
Which girl’s box has a toy?

(Here’s ANOTHER story.

Which girl’s box has a toy?

What is a PROMISE?

5 (form F: Promise\Will, Male)

I have a bunch of little boxes. Let me show you. Some of the boxes have TOYS inside of them (opening up box). Some of the boxes don’t have ANYTHING INSIDE. We can play a game with these boxes. Here’s what we’ll do: I’ll tell you STORIES about boys and girls. You’ll LISTEN to what they say, and you can FIGURE OUT which boxes have TOYS inside. OK?

You can PICK which box has a toy, and when we’re DONE with the stories, we can open the boxes to see if there are TOYS inside.

Here’s the FIRST story.
Here’s two boys: a BLUE boy and a RED boy.
The BLUE boy says: I PROMISE I’ll put a toy in my box.
The RED boy says: I WILL put a toy in my box.

NOW ONE of the boys is gonna put a TOY in his box. (Taking board and applying boxes.)
Now REMEMBER:
The BLUE boy said: I PROMISE I’ll (put a toy in my box)
and the RED boy said: I WILL (put a toy in my box).
Which boy’s box has a toy?

Codebook Information
Codebook for Study 1

SUBNUM  Subject Number  Format: F8.2

There are gaps in sequence because participants who could not complete the procedure due to interruptions (or for other reasons) were assigned subject numbers in this study, although they did not contribute data to the study. In subsequent studies, only those participants who contributed data were assigned subject numbers.

SYSTEMDA  Number of days between petition date and interview date  Format: F8.2

The number of days the child had been in the dependency court system at the time she was interviewed (excluding periods during which dependency jurisdiction had been terminated)

MOVEMENT  Times child was moved from one placement to another  Format: F8.2

The number of times the child was moved from one placement to another. For example, if the child had been removed from home and placed in foster care, she would receive a 1. If she had been removed from home, placed in foster care, and then placed with a relative, she would receive a 2.

LIEFIRST  Flag if identification trial was a true statement  Format: F8.2

Whether the first identification trial was a true or a false statement (to control for order effects).

TRUTHGEX  Points earned explaining good/bad lie/truth morality task  Format: F8.2

The number of points earned when explaining responses to the two questions during the morality task that asked whether it was good or bad to tell the truth to an authority figure. Children could score a maximum of four points (2 2-point responses)

Each of the two explanations could earn up to 2 points. If a child’s response could be scored in different ways, the highest score was awarded.

2 points: child referred to the importance of the information to the authority figure or the consequences of telling the truth or telling a lie
1 point: child simply referred to the morality/immorality of telling the truth or telling a lie, using terms other than “bad” or “good” (e.g. “It’s wrong to tell a lie”)
0 points: The child simply said “because,” repeated some of the words in the question (e.g. “because it is bad”), said “I don’t know,” refused to answer, or provided an irrelevant or incomprehensible response.

LIEBADEX  Points earned explain good/bad lie/truth to auth fig  Format: F8.2

The number of points earned when explaining responses to the two questions during the morality task that asked whether it was good or bad to tell a lie to an authority figure. Children could score a maximum of four points (2 2-point responses).

LIENUM2P  Number of times child provided 2 point response in auth fig  Format: F8.2

The number of times the child provided a 2 point response when explaining responses to the two questions during the morality task that asked whether it was good or bad to tell a lie to an authority figure.

TRUTHNUM  Number of times child provided 2 point resp in good/bad lie to auth  Format: F8.2

The number of times the child provided a 2 point response when explaining responses to the two questions during the morality task that asked whether it was good or bad to tell a lie to an authority figure.

|           | The highest score earned when explaining responses to the four questions during the morality task that asked whether it was good or bad to tell the truth/tell a lie to an authority figure. (For example, if a child earned 1 point on one explanation, but 2 points on another, that child would receive two points.) Note that the scoring is similar to that used for the other explanation variables (TRUTHGEX - TRUTHNUM), except that a distinction is made between describing the effects of lying on the authority figure’s decision-making and the negative consequences of lying more generally.
|           | 3 points: child referred to the importance of the information to the authority figure, that is, how it would affect the authority figure’s actions or decisions (but not simply that it would make the authority figure angry or punitive)
|           | 2 points: child referred to the consequences of telling the truth or telling a lie
|           | 1 point: child simply referred to the morality/immorality of telling the truth or telling a lie, using terms other than “bad” or “good” (e.g. “It’s wrong to tell a lie”)

|           | The number of correct responses (out of 2 possible) to the morality task trial in which the child was asked whether telling the truth/telling a lie to a judge would be bad or good and would make the judge happy or mad. |         |
DIFFWARM  Highest score earned explaining warm up trials  Format: F8.2

The highest score earned when explaining responses to the two warm-up trials on the difference task, in which children were shown a pair of different objects and a pair of identical objects, and asked whether they were the “same” or “different.”

Each of the two explanations could earn up to 2 points. If a child’s response could be scored in different ways, the highest score was awarded.

2 points: The child mentioned aspects of the objects that were different/the same. Does not include responses where the child simply said the pictures as a whole were the same or different.

1 point: The child simply named the objects.

0 points: The child simply said the pictures were the same or different, gave an irrelevant or incomprehensible answer, failed to answer, or said “I don’t know.”

DIFFEXP  Points earned in explaining truth/lie same/diff  Format: F8.2

The number of points earned when explaining the response to the question whether telling the truth and telling a lie were the same or different If a child’s response could be coded in different ways, the highest score was awarded.

2 points: The child gave an example of a lie or a truthful statement, e.g. “You did something but you said your brother did it.” The child explained the difference in terms of whether what one says matches reality. For example, “When you lie you say something that is wrong/that isn’t true/that didn’t really happen.” (Note: this excludes responses that refer to what is right or wrong in a purely moral sense, e.g. “It is wrong to lie” is not the same as “When you tell a lie you say something wrong.” “It is wrong to lie” is awarded one point.)

1 point: The child simply referred to the consequences or morality of telling a lie/the truth, or equating telling lies and telling the truth with being good or bad or doing good or bad things.

0 points: The child simply said that they are not the same or different, gave an irrelevant or incomprehensible answer, gave no answer, or said “I don’t know.”

DIFFQUAL  Qualitative version of deffexp variable  Format: F8.2

Similar to DIFFEXP, except that responses are defined more narrowly so that a qualitative analysis of children’s explanations can be conducted.

7 = The child explained the difference in terms of whether what one says matches reality. For example, “When you lie you say something that is wrong/that isn’t true/that didn’t really happen.”

6 = The child gave an example of a lie or a truthful statement, e.g. “You did something but you said your brother did it.”

5 = The child simply referred to the consequences or morality of telling a lie/the truth.

4 = The child equated telling lies and telling the truth with being good or bad or doing good or bad things.

3= The child simply said that they are not the same or different.

2 = The child gave an irrelevant or incomprehensible answer.

1 = The child gave no answer, or said “I don’t know.”
DIFFPUN    Flag if explanation of difference referred to phys punish    Format: F8.2

Whether the child’s explanation to the question whether telling the truth and lies are the same or different includes reference to physical punishment, e.g. spanking, hitting, “whupping.”

Value   Label
.00 no reference to physical punishment
1.00 reference to physical punishment

DIFONLYO Flag if explanation of difference only referred to one term    Format: F8.2

Whether the child’s explanations to the question whether telling the truth and lies are the same or different only referred to one of the terms (truth or lie).

Value   Label
.00 refers to both terms
1.00 only mentions lie
2.00 only mentions truth

DIFFVIOL Flag if explanation of difference referred to other violence    Format: F8.2

Whether the child’s explanation to the question whether telling the truth and lies are the same or different included reference to violence exclusive of physical punishment (e.g. killing, shooting, punching, but not spanking, hitting or “whupping”).

DIFFUSE Flag if child used terms correctly in warm up difference tasks    Format: F8.2

Whether the child correctly stated in the difference task warm-ups that that the different pair of pictures were “different” and that the identical pair were “the same.”

Value   Label
.00 did not use the terms correctly
1.00 did use the terms correctly

DIFFQUES Flag if child correctly stated lie and truth were different    Format: F8.2

Whether the child correctly stated that telling the truth and telling a lie were different.

Value   Label
.00 incorrect
1.00 correct

DEFKNOWL Flag if child knew what it meant to tell a lie    Format: F8.2

Whether the child answered yes when asked if she knew what it meant to tell a lie on the definition task.
The number of points earned when defining what it meant to tell a lie. Note that the coding is similar to that for the difference task.

If a child’s response could be coded in different ways, the highest score was awarded.

2 points: The child gave an example of a lie or a truthful statement, e.g. “You did something but you said your brother did it.” The child defined truth or a lie in terms whether what one says matches reality. For example, “When you lie you say something that is wrong/that isn’t true/that didn’t really happen.” (Note: this excludes responses that refer to what is right or wrong in a purely moral sense, e.g. “It is wrong to lie” is not the same as “When you tell a lie you say something wrong.” “It is wrong to lie” is awarded one point.)

1 point: The child simply referred to the consequences or morality of telling a lie/the truth, or equating telling lies and telling the truth with being good or bad or doing good or bad things.

0 points: The child gave an irrelevant or incomprehensible answer, gave no answer, or said “I don’t know.”

DEFKNOWT
Flag if child knew what it meant to tell truth
Format: F8.2
Whether the child answered yes when asked if she knew what it meant to tell the truth on the definition task.

DEFTRUE
Points earned defining truth
Format: F8.2
The number of points earned when defining what it meant to tell a lie. See 45 DEFLIE

DEFONE
Points earned defining truth and lie
Format: F8.2
The sum of points earned for defining the truth and defining a lie (45 + 47)

DEFLQUAL
Qualitative version of deflie variable
Format: F8.2
Similar to DEFLIE, except that responses are defined more narrowly so that a qualitative analysis of children’s explanations can be conducted.

6 = The child defined the words in terms of whether what one says matches reality. For example, “When you lie you say something that is wrong/that isn’t true/that didn’t really happen.”

5 = The child gave an example of a lie or a truthful statement, e.g. “You did something but you said your brother did it.”

4 = The child simply referred to the consequences or morality of telling a lie/the truth.

3 = The child equated telling lies and telling the truth with being good or bad or doing good or bad things.

2 = The child gave an irrelevant or incomprehensible answer.

1 = The child gave no answer, or said “I don’t know.”
DEFTQUAL  Qualitative version of deftrue variable  Format: F8.2

Similar to DEFTURE, except that responses are defined more narrowly so that a qualitative analysis of children’s explanations can be conducted. See DEFLQUAL.

DEFPUN  Flag if def of truth or lie referred to phys punishment  Format: F8.2
